

Secure Coding Practices

Validate untrusted input at application boundaries and use parameterized queries for database access. Never commit credentials, tokens, or private keys to source control. Handle errors without exposing secrets or personal data in logs. Review security-sensitive changes before release and update dependencies when a relevant security fix is available.